HONGKONG, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1896.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The troublesome and difficult question of Chinese emigration to the United States and to the Canadas appears to be coming to the front again. LI HUNG-CHANG has been journeying through Canada has been anxiously inquiring as to the truth of the report that the poll tax levied on Chinese immigrants was about to be raised from $50 to $500, a sum which would almost seem prohibitive. We publish in another column a leading article from the Province—a weekly published in Victoria, B.C.—giving the outlines of the question as it appears to Canadians and from the side of those who are opposed to the entrance of the Mongolian. Broadly, the whole case for exclusion is there stated. To-morrow we shall publish a long article clipped from the Victoria, B.C. Colonist—a very ably conducted journal—giving the other side of the question, in which its bearings are very fully considered from the international point of view and as a question of reciprocity. So far as we in Hongkong are concerned, the question has been looked at pretty closely from two points of view. What effect will it have on our passenger traffic? How will it affect our shipping interests? What effect will a Canadian Prohibition Act—for that is what it will amount to—have on our relations with the Chinese Government? It will hardly operate towards opening China to us, that one more of our Colonies should resolutely close its doors against John Chinaman. The question has little more than an academic interest for poor exiles in Hongkong. We may study it. We may discuss it until we have mastered every feature of the case. We may protest and "represent" until we have exhausted our own energies and the patience of the Colonial Office, but the question will be decided for us, without very much consideration either for our arguments or for our interests.

At Saratoga, N.Y., on the 22nd ultimo, Lord Russell of Kilfowen delivered the inaugural address at the annual meeting of the American Bar Association.
He had a most sympathetic audience of over four thousand of the ablest men to be found in the United States—Lawyers, Journalists, Politicians, Statesmen—and he achieved an immense success, not merely there and then, but with the more extended audience throughout the States, to whom, by means of the Press, his words were brought home. Judging from the opinions expressed on the subject in all the great organs of public opinion in America Lord Russell has done something considerable towards appeasing the feelings of hostility against England that have been gathering volume and strength throughout the Union for the last twelve months, and which have given to the Presidential Messages and to the Resolutions of the Senate and House of Representatives a significance that such Messages and Resolutions do not always carry with them. Lord Russell's address was an oratorical effort worthy of the speaker and of his position, of his subject, and of his audience, but it throws no further light on the question than we had before. There was no detailed discussion of the nature and limits of International Arbitration, no examination of the various suggestions put forward for the selection of the Judges who are to constitute this great International Court; of the preliminary steps that must be taken before a hearing; of the procedure of the Court; of the sanctions that are to carry into effective operation its decisions.

Lord Russell dilated on the advantages of arbitration and mediation between nations. He detailed the history of the movement in its various phases up to date. He indicated that it was not and from the nature of things, could never be applicable in certain classes of international troubles; but he did not define these. To have attempted to do so would have been, perhaps, to have ventured on very delicate ground and to have run the risk of alienating the feelings of those he most desired to conciliate. He pointed out that there were worse evils than war with all its horrors—"the dishonour of a great nation; the triumph of an unrighteous cause; the perpetration of hopeless and debasing tyranny." But all these things are the common places of the subject, and have been repeated over and over again by writers and speakers of every grade. Lord Russell's dispatches to Mr. OMBY have no other theme than this, that before there can be any arrangement for International Arbitration there must be a very clear understanding as to what cannot be submitted to any tribunal by any sovereign and independent State, by any self-respecting nation. Will England under any possible circumstances submit the question of Home Rule in Ireland to arbitration? Would she admit mediation or arbitration in the event of any dispute between the Indian Government and one of our greater feudatories?
Will France submit to any tribunal but that of Fate her title to Madagascar, now that she has once committed herself to the declaration that it is no longer a Protectorate but an integral part of her dominions? Will Russia forego her hold on Korea for any less cogent reason than fear or force? We think not. When the proposed Arbitration Treaty comes to be worked out in its practical details there will be a very much longer schedule of cases in which it is not to apply than of the disputes in which arbitration will be held to be compulsory.

SENSATIONAL ARREST OF FENIANS.

The Fenian Tynan, the notorious "No. 1," has been arrested at Boulogne on a warrant issued in 1882. The Fenians Bell, Wallace, and Haines have also been arrested. They were all acting together in the same gang and had organised a laboratory at Antwerp, where a complete dynamite armory was discovered.
The object of the plot is uncertain, but it is rumoured that the Fenians have joined the Fenians and attempted to be made on the life of the Tsar or the Queen during the former's visit to Balmoral.

Tynan was travelling in the guise of a Queen's Messenger when arrested.

GOOD NEWS!

MODIFICATION OF QUARANTINE AT MANILA.

The Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce courteously informs us that he received this afternoon a letter from the Colonial Secretary enclosing copy of the following telegram from the British Consul at Manila:—
"Governor—Hongkong.

"Quarantine arrivals. China without Chinese passengers. Three to five days; with Chinese seven days."

This is good news; but what about the rebellion? Has it been completely suppressed, or is the situation still so grave that messages bearing on the subject can only be transmitted to Madrid on Government business?

(Crown Solicitor) said a man went into the defendant received the money and gave an

THE UNITED ASBESTOS ORIENTAL AGENCY, LIMITED.

The first general meeting of the shareholders in the United Asbestos Oriental Agency, Limited, was held this afternoon at the Hongkong Hotel.
Mr. G. B. Dodwell, presided, and there were also present—Messrs. A. Anderson, D. Gillies, J. P. Dowling, F. Dodwell, A. O'D. Goardin, and G. H. Medhurst.

The Chairman said this was simply a statutary meeting called in accordance with section 28 of the Companies Ordinance, 1865. The whole of the shares had been applied for and the business started on a satisfactory basis. The first instalment of stock arrived at the beginning of June and agencies would be started in Singapore and Japan. If any shareholders desired information it would be freely given by the General Managers, Messrs. DeWitt, Camill & Co. That was all the business before the meeting. He thanked shareholders for their attendance.

This concluded the proceedings.

THE REVOLUTION IN THE PHILIPPINES.

SINGAPORE, September 10th.

Advice from a correspondent at Manila, dated 3rd instant, states that the outbreak in the Philippines continues. The Spanish authorities are adopting every possible measure to suppress the rising, and to prevent its spreading throughout the provinces. It is not such a serious rising as was at first anticipated, and it is firmly believed at Manila that the authorities will cope with it successfully. The foreigners in Manila do not anticipate any serious danger to lives or property.—Straits Times.

[The latter statement that foreigners in Manila do not anticipate any serious danger to lives and property does not quite fit in with the tone of the communications from Manila published by the Singapore Free Press and which we reproduced in our last issue.—Ed. H.K.T.] colony, they had been probably "advised" to be careful not to say too much, nor even to go out toiffin! Sr. Garcholena, a rich and important resident of Manila, was a passenger by

MONGOLIAN IMMIGRATION AS VIEWED IN VANCOUVER.

VICTORIA, B.C., August 18th.

At the two meetings recently held in Vancouver for the purpose of discussing the question of Chinese immigration, a very considerable number of those present strongly favoured the restriction of the immigration of Mongolians into Canada. This question it will be remembered was one of the prominent planks of both the Liberal and Conservative platforms in the late election and is daily assuming such proportions in the British Columbia that the most strenuous efforts will have to be made if it is to be successfully coped with. Sentiment in Vancouver is strongly anti-Mongolian, as was unquestionably demonstrated at the late meetings, and the time has come when ways and means whereby the increasing immigration of this nature may be stopped should be considered.

As a primary and very proper move in the right direction a provincial committee is to be appointed to inquire, circulate, and obtain signatures to a petition requesting the Dominion Government to take the necessary steps to restrict the immigration of Mongolians.

Had the Provincial Legislature been more active in the matter we should not now be in so bad a plight, as undoubtedly upon the shoulders of the Local Government rests the greater portion of responsibility for the present difficult position; for how can we expect that people in Eastern Canada or the Dominion Parliament will pay any marked heed to our representations, or believe that this evil is a slight one, when not a single word favouring restriction is entered in the records of the Provincial Legislature? Such neglect has time and again called forth the denunciations of British Columbians, for from a strictly humanitarian standpoint alone the curtailing of Mongolian labour is eminently desirable, to say nothing of the beneficial effect upon white men of the daily and close contact with, and example of, Chinese filth, immorality, gambling, polygamy, and opium and also the danger to the life entailed by the employment of the Chinese in the mines. This subject has already, though none too strongly, been dealt with in The Province.
If Vancouver succeeds in instituting such steps towards improvement in the matter Nanaimo will certainly second her efforts, but the trouble is that there is not at present sufficient unity amongst the agitators regarding the initial moves to be made in the direction of the desired goal of exclusion. Co-operation is absolutely necessary to achievement of this common interest of the country.

The proposal to raise the pro capita tax from $50 to $500 has been suggested as the most feasible inaugural step, and would go far towards quelling the evil at its source. The plan has been adopted in Australia with satisfactory results, as it serves to completely exclude the low class class of Mongolians from the country —a great point gained at the start.

Unconstitutional methods or extreme measures are not demanded, but the evils arising from the very presence of these people in the Dominion can only be cured by the removal of the cause, and when we see how the increasing hordes of Chinese, which are flooding across walks of life, such as vegetable and fruit vending, laundrying, domestic service, agriculture, railways, mining, etc., are retarding the progress of the province, it becomes apparent that soon the question "white or Chinese?" will be the only all-absorbing one in this locality.

It is log of things to come rather than a statement of what has actually happened, but in our rural districts we are face to face with a disaster that has already overwhelmed us. The ruin of English rural industry is a matter that stares us in the face at every turn. Our poor peasants find themselves hopelessly beaten by the foreign competitor, not merely in those great staples such as wheat, but in the smaller and valuable secondary products of the farm. How closely this is connected with the lack of good sound education, and also of intellectual applied science to the holding of an economic problem, the example of the Danish market is an illustration in point. The condition of English education in rural districts is a disgrace to the nation. The children cease to go to school between ten and eleven. The schools themselves, especially the rural board schools, are often disgracefully inefficient, and the children after leaving the schools hardly ever open a book. Hence, when they arrive at manhood and womanhood they can hardly read or write. What is wanted, therefore, is an agitation in the recess directed definitely towards the aim of raising the age of attendance, and of improving instead of impairing the efficiency of our elementary schools, so as to afford a base upon which to superimpose the technical schools which are so urgently needed.

THE DOUGLAS STEAMSHIP COMPANY, LIMITED.

The following is the report for presentation to the shareholders at the thirteenth ordinary general meeting to be held at the office of the Company on Saturday, the 26th instant, at noon:

The General Managers have now to submit to the shareholders their Report on the thirteenth year's working of the Company, ended 30th June, 1896. After paying all running expenses, premia of insurance, remuneration to Consulting Committee and Auditors' fees, there remains a net profit of $255,337.09, and, with the consent of the shareholders, it is proposed to appropriate this amount as follows:—

To write off $43,721.50 from the value of the Company's property (excluding the Hainan) on 30th June last, being the equivalent of 8 per cent. thereon, and to pay a dividend of 12 per cent. on the capital of the Company, which will absorb a further $120,000 to transfer $50,000 to the credit of the Reserve Fund, and carry forward to next year's account the balance of $161,615.59.

During the period under review there has been some troublesome competition, especially on the Formosa line, but the Company still maintains its position in the esteem of shippers generally. To meet opposition and fulfill temporary requirements, the steamers Continental and Cosmopolite were chartered for short periods. The new steamer Hainan arrived in April last, and immediately commenced running on the Tamari line: she is splendidly adapted for the work and is a valuable acquisition to the Company's fleet.

The steamers have been maintained in their usual state of efficiency, the Namoa having undergone a very extensive overhaul. In usual course it may be stated that the amounts appearing as Freight Due and Accounts Receivable on 30th June have all been collected.

Consulting Committee.—Since the last general meeting, Mr. Nathan has resigned his seat, and Mr. Thomas now fills the vacancy. The Committee now consists of Messrs. D. R. Sassoon, Hon. J. J. Bell, Irvine, A. Ross, and C. A. Thomas. In terms of the Articles of Association, all these gentlemen retire, but, being eligible, offer themselves for re-election.

Auditors.—The present accounts have been audited by Messrs. J. H. Cox and W. H. Gaskell, who retire, but offer themselves for re-election.

LI HUNG-CHANG IN ENGLAND.

THE VISIT TO THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

His Excellency Li Hung-chang was aboard early this morning, and arrived at the Bank of England a few minutes before two o'clock, arrayed in his yellow jacket and wearing his peacock feather. He was accompanied by Mr. Scott, of the Foreign Office; Mr. Tseng, of the Chinese Legation; and the Interpreter, Mr. Lo Feng Loh. The brilliantly coloured carriage of Lord Lansdale excited a good deal of interest in the city, and when his Excellency arrived within the building, the clerks seemed by common understanding to abandon their work in order to get a view of the distinguished visitor. He was received at the Lobbys entrance by Mr. H. E. Sandiman, the Governor of the Bank, and at once conducted to the Board Room, where some of the Directors had already assembled. His Excellency was accommodated with a chair near one of the windows, Mr. Sandiman sitting on his immediate right. The other Directors present were the Hon. Evelyn Hubbard and Sir Mark Collet.

It was explained to the Envoy that the room in which he was seated was that in which the Directors carried on their business, and he at once asked how many there were, to which Mr. Sandiman replied that there were twenty-four, with Governor and Deputy-Governor. His Excellency gave a glance around, and remarked that it was an immense building, and in reply to another question was told—all this went on through the medium of the Interpreter—that the business was started in 1694. It was explained to him further, in reply to his questions, that this was Mr. Sandiman's second year as Governor, and that the Directors took it in turn. He wished to know whether the Bank was under the control of the Minister of Finance, and was told that it was a private company, but that it had a very intimate connection with the Government, because it kept all the Government accounts.

Mr. Sandiman shrugged his shoulders when asked how many shareholders there were. In reply to other questions, he said that the capital of the Bank was £14,000,000 sterling, with a reserve fund of £3,000,000, and that the capital was larger than that of any bank in Europe, the amount of deposits being £30,000,000, and including the funds of the public, £60,000,000. His Excellency observed that the British Government borrowed money at a very low rate of interest, to which Mr. Sandiman answered that some rates were at 2½ per cent., and they would be reduced to 2½ per cent., and some of these were at a premium.

The public, said Mr. Sandiman, were content with 2½ per cent., because they felt that their money was quite safe. His Excellency next asked what dividend was paid, and he was told that it was 8½ per cent. on £100 stock, which was worth in the market £340. Li wished to know why the public did not invest money in industrial and mining enterprises, which paid very much better than 2½ per cent. Mr. Sandiman replied that people did invest largely in such enterprises, and that it had a very intimate connection with the Government, because it kept all the Government accounts.

His Excellency replied that the English people were, he knew, the leading commercial people in the world, and he understood that they would not be content with 2½ per cent. unless they were trustees who wished to be quite secure. Mr. Sandiman said that was so, and at this stage asked to be allowed to introduce Sir Martin Collet and the Hon. Evelyn Hubbard, two of the Directors, to Li Hung-chang, who had his long pipe in an attendant, and, rising, shook hands with the gentlemen. His Excellency immediately wanted to know how long they had been Directors, and wished to know the age of Sir Mark Collet. The latter replied that if he lived another six weeks he would be eighty.

Li seemed delighted at this and replied, "You look as young as if you were quite young." "And, perhaps," chimed in Mr. Sandiman, "he is a good deal better than many a younger man." At this there was much amusement. The Hon. Evelyn Hubbard having expressed the pleasure with which he made Li Hung-chang's acquaintance, the latter resumed his examination into the method of governing and working the Bank of England, a variety of questions being asked. "Had a Director the right to examine accounts?" Oh, yes, he was told; and it was added that the Governor thought above was subject to the Directors.

"Do you come to the Bank every day?" he asked Mr. Sandiman, to which that gentleman answered, "We take turns in coming, each of us having a fortnight at a time." A volume of further questions ensued, in the course of which Mr. Sandiman said he always asked the advice of the Directors in matters of business, and so the Governor of the Bank was not all powerful, but when anything arose requiring to be dealt with immediately he had to act on his own responsibility. His Excellency asked that the Deputy-Governor might be presented, but was told that he was away in Scotland.

Here there seemed a disposition to move on the part of some of the company, but Li Hung-chang, through the Interpreter, said that he had still a great deal to ask, and wanted more information. Thereupon the conference was resumed. His Excellency observed that foreign Governments borrowed money from England, and he asked why the Bank of England did not do the loans for them. Sir Mark Collet here undertook some of the replies, and observed that they did not make the Bank responsible for the act of foreign countries; they only acted for the British Government and as a British bank.

"How many banks are there in London?" he asked Li. "About fifty," replied Sir Mark Collet. "And you have accounts with all these banks?" "Yes," said Sir Mark, "they all keep accounts here." "We," joined in Mr. Hubbard, "are the guardians of the resources of the nation. Ultimately they all come to us." "Do the Rothschilds deposit their money here?" he asked Li, to which Mr. Sandiman answered, "They have an account here which varies from time to time."

His Excellency observed that a very big staff must be maintained at the Bank, and he asked how the revenue was derived. Mr. Sandiman replied that it came from the investments of the Bank, the Government securities in which it got interest, whilst it lent money on Government security on which it charged interest, and this provided money to pay the expenses and dividend. In reply to many other questions, he was told that the Government deposited money in this Bank instead of smaller ones, because they wanted it to be as safe as possible; Mr. Hubbard remarking, "We practically manage all the Government stocks, and the use of this money is part of the consideration we get for that."

He was first told that the shareholders were not liable for more than their share, that the Bank was limited by charter, and that Mr. Sandiman's two years would end in April. Then there was a pause. Li took two or three draws at his pipe, when he suddenly observed, "You have twenty-four directors; why do not some of you go to the East or to other foreign countries to establish banks?"

At this there was some laughter. Sir Mark Collet observed, "We have enough to do here," while Mr. Sandiman added, "Many of the Directors have establishments of their own in foreign countries." Mr. Hubbard has one in Russia; I have one in Portugal and one in Spain; while Sir Mark has one in New York." His Excellency next asked how the billions were kept, what it consisted of, &c. He was told that some were sovereigns, some were in bars of gold, and some in coils of foreign countries. They bought the gold; the bars were made by refiners. "How do you get the bars into coils?" he inquired.

Sir M. Collet explained that when the Bank wanted sovereigns it sent the ingots to the Mint to be turned into sovereigns. The Government, he said, made a considerable profit at the Mint, because the shillings and sixpences which they made were not worth those sums. At this Li Hung-chang smiled, and went on smoking. He wished to know whether the prices of gold would go down, Sir M. Collet replied that it could not, for everything else must adjust itself to the price of gold.

"Will the price of silver come up?" asked Li. Sir Mark returned that this was very uncertain. Very much depended upon the result of the action of the American Government. His Excellency observed that the silver-tallic question could only be settled by silver using and producing countries, so that China, Japan, and America must decide, the bimetallic question. He said—"If we are to work hand in hand with Japan, we must make some proposal to the Emperor and his nation to have a fixed ratio 1:2 between gold and silver, but if you do not approve of it we cannot do it."

Sir M. Collet observed, "It is a very big question." Li then remarked, "England could settle the question if she wished, but she has her own interests to protect, and so England will only do things to her own advantage, and not to the advantage of other people." Sir M. Collet remarked, "Like every other Government," at which the Chinese Viceroys laughed and said, "Yes, it is the same all over the world, and especially with England." This provoked more amusement.

The following colloquy then ensued:—

Mr. Hubbard:—Everybody would be glad to see a ratio instituted between silver and gold, but the difficulty is to agree upon a ratio.

Li:—You had a conference in Brussels, but the question has now been allowed to drop.

Sir M. Collet:—Because they could not agree.

Li:—Now, you represent the first bank in the world; why do you not take the initiative in this question?

Sir M. Collet:—The bank never takes the initiative in any question of this kind. It is the British Government that does it.

Li:—But you are quite independent. You are not even under the control of your Ministry; so you ought to take an initiative part in the bimetallic question.

Sir M. Collet:—It is entirely outside the functions of the bank.

In the course of further conversation, it was pointed out to his Excellency that the gold standard had been fixed by Parliament, and only Parliament could alter it; upon which he asked why they did not do so, and he was told that even the House of Commons was not competent.

At the expiration of an hour the conversation was brought to a close, and Li Hung-chang visited one of the billiard rooms, and into a room in which the weight of sovereigns is tested. Before leaving he appended his signature to an imperfect 1/2 note, which will be retained at the bank as a souvenir of the visit.

AT THE POST OFFICE.

His Excellency next drove to the General Post Office. He was met by the Postmaster-General (the Duke of Norfolk), Mr. Spencer Walpole, Secretary of the Post Office; Mr. H. C. Fischer, Controller of the Telegraph Department; Mr. J. C. Lamb, the Secretary; Mr. W. E. Brown, the electrical engineer; Mr. J. C. Badcock, Controller, London Postal Service; Mr. Lewis Hill, Assistant Secretary of the Post Office; Mr. J. J. Carden, Receiver and Accountant-General, and others. The arrival of his Excellency at the Postmaster-General's entrance in King Edward Street created a good deal of public interest, and he was cheered by a large crowd. He first went to the Duke of Norfolk's private room, where he had some conversation with his Grace and signed his name in the visitors' book, and then he was escorted through the Postmaster-General's companying the visitors during a part of the time which they spent there. The inspection of the Post Office and the Telegraph Department involved a great deal of tedious going up and down stairs. The Envoy did not seem to mind it, as he sat placidly in his chair borne by four stalwart messengers. He seemed greatly interested in the various parts of the telegraph department, where there is a staff of some 3,000 operators. First he was escorted to the foreign telegraph gallery, where were exhibited a click of the instrument communicating with all parts of the world made conversation a difficulty. Having scrutinized the battery with "Roma" above it, the veteran statesman was escorted to the Paris wire, where, under his observation, the following message was dispatched in French:—"His Excellency the Viceroy of China honours us by a visit; will you say what news there is, and what the weather is like?"

Immediately there came back the reply:—"We also are honoured by the visit. It is very fine weather. Nothing new is passing on the wire."

The wire had been kept open, and there was absolutely no interval of time between the dispatch of the message and the receipt of the reply. Then his Excellency moved on to the Berlin wire, where a similar message to that sent to Paris was dispatched in German. The reply came back at once, and in English:—"We pray you offer his Excellency our respectful greetings. We have a very fine day here. There is not much news."

It now occurred to him to send a message on his telegraph to the Berlin telegraph authorities, who were informed that his Excellency wished to communicate with the German Emperor; but it was stated in reply that His Majesty was at Wilhelmshaven, and that he could not be got at by wire.

The telephone room was then visited, and his Excellency's compliments were offered to Mr. Hanotam, Minister of Foreign Affairs at Paris. Li was then escorted to the instrument room and shown how messages were distributed for transmission, whilst there was also a view of machine which it was said, would take six messages at the same time.

Passing into the Post Office he inspected the pneumatic tube room, in which messages handed in at various parts of London are received for transmission, and later on the circulation department came under notice, but owing to the time of day there was an absence of activity in this particular section.

AT THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Between four and five o'clock reception was given to Li by the President and Council of the London Chamber of Commerce, and its East India and China trade section, in the Fishmongers' Hall, which was crowded to excess. His Excellency was carried upstairs to the banquet hall, where he occupied a central chair beneath the China flag. He was formally received by Sir A. K. Rollet, M.P., the President of the London Chamber of Commerce, who subsequently presented several gentlemen to him. Sir A. K. Rollet remarked that he had been for a quarter of a century the leader of a progressive policy in China—of a policy of great commercial freedom and development. His Excellency's visit conducive as it was to the great commercial union of East and West, concerned both his own country and mine. Whatever the present commerce between the two countries, it was nothing to the prospective and potential trade. Mr. Hugh Matheson (Chairman East India and China Trade Section) also offered some remarks, in the course of which he expressed the hope that on his return Li Hung-chang would do more than ever before with his influence in facilitating the advance of trade, the introduction of railways, and the making of roads.

Li's REPLY.

These speeches were interpreted to the Ambassador by Mr. Lo Feng-loh, who at the conclusion of his talk said—Gentlemen, in obedience to the orders of the Viceroy, I have to rise to deliver his reply. It is as follows:—"The President, my Lords, and gentlemen, in tendering my cordial thanks for the addresses delivered by the President of the Chamber of Commerce of London and by the Chairman of the East India and China Trade Section, I find it impossible to refrain from expressing my feelings and sentiments, which have been so keenly touched and excited on this particular occasion. (Cheers) Thanks to my visit to England and to my stay in London, I can now assure you that I fully reciprocate the feelings expressed by these two gentlemen, and that I am just as much desirous as you are of the expansion of the unlimited trade between England and our country, because I know that it will benefit both. (Cheers) A statesman ought not to make promises—(laughter)—conceived at those times when his heart is moved by feelings and sentiments—(more laughter)—for only too often the unexpected will interfere with the will and the desire. However, for once I will act contrary to worldly wisdom and of caution. (Laughter and cheers) Accordingly, I will say that as long as my life lasts I shall make myself the advocate of progress, industry, and commerce—(cheers)—and, on account of the lessons which have been taught in the course of my journey, I will make it special object of my own always to raise my voice in favour of making the remotest corner of the Empire of my august Sovereign accessible to traffic—(cheers)—by the introduction of a sensibly planned and honestly executed and managed system of railways—(cheers)—inventions of which England has the best reason to be proud. (Cheers) My Lords and gentlemen, I hope that London will one day record that I am most faithful and true to the will and the wishes I expressed during my stay here amongst you." (Cheers) The Interpreter added—The Viceroy thus brings his speech to a conclusion. This is the reply which expresses his feelings on this occasion. (Cheers)

The remainder of the time was given up to conversation and listening to music, whilst some additional presentations were made to the Envoy, who afterwards drove away amid the cheers of the onlookers.

THE "SCOTSMAN" ON THE CHUNG TANG'S UTTERANCES.

By far the most important pronouncement which Li Hung-chang has publicly made during his European tour was that in which he replied to the welcome given to him by the East India and China Trade Section of the London Chamber of Commerce. At a time when we are told that British prestige and influence have been ruined in the Far East, and that Germany and Russia and France are destined to divide the lion's share of all the commercial advantages which are expected to follow the opening up of new ports, it is interesting to note that Li himself, who has always been and will remain while he lives the most potent factor in promoting European methods among his unprogressive countrymen, is of a different mind. It has often been suggested that he has never been very friendly to England. It is true that he has been the intermediary in a number of negotiations between this country and the Tung-ti Yamen, in which the pressure imposed by us has been firm; and as we have of all European Powers had most to say to China in the past, it is almost inevitable that occasions should have arisen in which Li may have resented our demands. But the whole history of this remarkably astute Oriental, no less than the testimony of those who have known him best in favourable rather than in the gloom of China, of which they were not slow to avail themselves. To what extent we are the losers by this policy it is perhaps too soon to say. But it is at least satisfactory to learn from the lips of Li Hung-chang himself that he bears us no ill-will, and that in the coming opening up of the markets of China to European commerce he looks to British traders to play an important part.

So important is the statement which he made yesterday that its pertinent passages are worthy of quotation. He began by a humorous reference to the folly of statesmen who make promises when moved by sentiment. But for once he would act contrary to worldly wisdom and caution. "I am desirous," said Li Hung-chang, "of the expansion of unlimited trade between England and China, to the benefit of both." And then he added—"As long as my life lasts I shall make myself the advocate of progress, industry, and commerce; and on account of the lessons I have learned in the course of my journey, I will make it a special object of my own always to raise my voice in favour of making the remotest corner of the Empire of my august Sovereign accessible to traffic by the introduction of a sensibly planned and honestly executed and managed system of railways—inventions of which England has the best reason to be proud. I hope that London will one day record that I am most faithful and true to the will and the wishes I expressed during my stay here amongst you." There is a ring of true sincerity about these words which it would be foolish to disregard. The whole career of the Viceroy has been devoted to teaching his unprogressive countrymen the advantages of European enterprise and enlightenment. It has been no easy task. The dead-weight of interested officialdom has ever resisted his efforts. The Court has been estranged by intrigues again and again, only to be compelled to restore to favour a man who had made himself absolutely indispensable. The three hundred millions of inhabitants have held themselves indifferent and apathetic. In all the circumstances of the case, Li's work is no small one. He should have achieved so much. He reformed the Chinese army with the aid of Gordon and others, so far at least as to make it superior to the rebel bands which trouble the Empire. He created a navy upon modern lines. He fortified strongholds at important strategic points, equipping them with guns of the best European makes. It is true that in the late war the Japanese, who had adopted Western methods of war with singular readiness and enthusiasm, proved themselves as all points superior to their foe. But this was not the fault of the man who had forced these reforms upon China; but rather of the incompetent and corrupt officials appointed to carry the system into practice.

Of a man so weighted with years as Li, it is hardly to be expected that he should be so full of heart as to expect too much. Yet it is of interest to the commercial world to know that what remains to him of the energy, foresight, and ability which have distinguished his whole career will now be directed to opening up his country to trade. For that after all is the path and substance of his statement. The importance of railway communications he long ago recognized, but though the first railway, which was ever laid was pulled up by intrigues and fanaticism, Li does not despair of his countrymen even in the matter of railways on a gigantic scale. If, as he hopes, he can establish a well planned and well conducted railway system, and thereby open up the vast natural resources of his country that at present lie unworked, he will have conferred upon China and upon the trading world a benefit of incalculable magnitude. He has an ally in the disastrous termination of the late war, for his advice will now be listened to with greater readiness by the powers that rule the destinies of the Celestial Empire. Apart from his speech to the London merchants, great interest attaches to his interview with the Bank of England Directors and Governors, which took place earlier in the day. It is impossible not to admire the sagacity with which he seized the kernel of the problems of finance discussed. Even on bimetallicism the astute Oriental was able to discourse fluently, and he showed a humorous appreciation of Great Britain's reasons for adhering to the gold standard. His visit to the Post Office also appears to have given Li much matter for intelligent wonder. It is, as we have said, too much to look for great works of reform from a man of the age of Li Hung-chang; but his keen observation and lively interest in all the marvels of Western civilization justify the expectation that he is a man of power, and the next cycle of his career will witness wonderful changes in a country which for centuries has been making time.

Now, from the location of the liver we have a word used for ages to express one of the most unhappy conditions a human being can fall into—the word Apocodysia (often abbreviated to "ipo"), the word meaning under the cartilage.

"For seven years," writes a correspondent, "I suffered from complaint of the liver. I was very bilious, my skin was yellow and dry, and the whites of my eyes yellow. I had much pain and weight at my right side, and was constantly depressed and melancholy. It seemed to be out of my power to take a hopeful or cheerful view of anything. The effect of this complaint on the mind was one of the aspects of it hardest to bear."

"I had lost my natural appetite, and so to support life; but there was no more any genuine relish for food or drink. The bad taste in my mouth made all that I took taste bad. Sometimes I would be taken sick and throw up all I had eaten; and after a meal no matter how slender and simple, I was troubled with fulness and pain at the chest. I used many kinds of medicines and while some of them may have relieved me for the moment, none conferred any lasting benefit, and I was soon as bad as ever."

"In March, 1893, I read in a small book of what Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup had done in cases similar to mine, and was especially interested in the account given in the book of the nature and cure of the liver and its disorders. I got a bottle of the Syrup from Boots' Drug Stores, and after taking it a few days felt quite like a new man. It seemed to correct my stomach and liver and clear my system of all bile; and it left me in capital health. Since that time I have kept Mother Seigel's Syrup in the house as a family medicine and have recommended it to all my friends as the best known cure for ailments like the one from which I suffered so miserably and so long. You can use this statement as you like. (Signed) John Gent, 29, Coventry Road, Bulwell, Nottingham, March 31st, 1895."

"In the spring of 1891," writes another, "I found myself in bad health. I had no appetite, and the little I did eat did me no good, gave me no strength. I had great pain and weight at the chest and right side, and my skin turned sallow and dry. My kidneys also acted badly, and from time to time I had attacks of gravel; and cold, clammy, wakefulness sweats broke out all over me. Being only seventeen years old when the trouble began I was greatly alarmed and anxious. No doctor was able to help me, and I continued thus for over three years. In June, 1894, I began to use Mother Seigel's Syrup and soon felt better, lighter, and more cheerful, and by taking it a few weeks longer I recovered my health and strength. Since then, when I have any stomach, liver, or kidney symptoms I resort to Mother Seigel's Syrup and it never fails to set me right. You can publish this letter. (Signed) O. Hanson, 6, New Inn Lane, Gloucester, May 31st, 1895."

The stomach, the liver, and the kidneys are all connected parts of the food and digestive system. When disordered (usually through torpidity of the stomach) they cripple the body and throw a gloom as of night over the mind. On the earliest signs of anything wrong with them use Mother Seigel's Syrup at once.—Add.
